October 14, 2010 (ATLANTA) - All About Developmental Disabilities (AADD) - Atlanta's foremost nonprofit provider of support services for families living with developmental disabilities - is entering its new fiscal year with an updated Board of Directors. The agency has appointed medical leader Alan Weintraub, financial guru David Fosgate and legal expert Shelly Nixon as new additions to its Board of Directors.

"We are honored to have these renowned experts and prominent local leaders join our already dynamic board of directors," said Dave Blanchard, executive director, AADD. "We look forward to having these respected thought leaders join our board as we continue to move forward with exciting and important decisions in the upcoming year."

Alan Weintraub, MD is a nationally-renowned authority on developmental disabilities who is dual board-certified physician with specialties in pediatrics and developmental pediatrics. He is actively involved in the Bregman Series, an annual program for adults with developmental disabilities, and serves on Developmental Disabilities Advisory Committee for the Marcus Jewish Community Center as well as the advisory board for the Amit School, a program developed for children with developmental disabilities. He has been named Outstanding Physician of the Year by AADD and twice-honored with the with the AUTISM HERO award by The Greater Atlanta chapter of the Autism Society of America.

David Fosgate is Vice President and financial advisor with Peachtree Planning Corporation. He specializes in comprehensive net worth protection, risk management, estate and business succession planning and group and employee benefits. Fosgate is a cum laude graduate Washington and Lee University in Lexington, Virginia. Fosgate is a member of the Steering Committee of the Planned Giving Committee for The Lovett School, his alma mater, and serves on the Washington and Lee Atlanta Alumni Board as well as Atlanta Admissions Committee. Prior to joining the board of AADD, Fosgate served on its Investment Committee.

Shelly Nixon is an estate planning expert with the law firm Lefkoff, Duncan, Grimes, Miller & McSwain, P.C., where she specializes in business taxes, tax-exempt estates, tax planning and tax-exempt formation and compliance. Nixon is a cum laude graduate of the University of Florida's Levin School of Law, where she served as Title Standards Editor for the Florida Law Review. Nixon has been listed as a Georgia Rising Star in Atlanta Magazine and Super Lawyers Magazine in both 2006 and 2009.

About All About Developmental Disabilities

Atlanta's preeminent resource on developmental disabilities, All About Developmental Disabilities (AADD) has been providing support services to families for more than 50 years. We are often the one place where people with developmental disabilities can go to achieve personal empowerment, family stability and community participation. AADD employs a family- and community-based approach to helping families with developmental disabilities, because the impact isn't limited to just one individual. We provide consultation and planning; individual and family support services; and education and political advocacy. For more information, visit www.aadd.org.
